War of the Cattle Men. A terrible state of affairs is reported lo exist in Johnson County, Wyo., on the eastern side of the Big Hern Mountain's. The owners or managers of the big cattle ranches in that region have long suffered from the depredations committed by organized bands of thieves, technically known there as "rustlers," and took up arms in alleged self-protection. Forty of them were surrounded at the T. A. Ranch by about 300 of their foes. The Acting Governor of Wyoming telegraphed to Washington, briefly stating the facts, and requested that troops be sent at once, as the disturbers of the peace had grown so numerous as to be beyond the control of the State officials. Senators Carey and Warren at once called on Acting Secretary of War Grant. General Schofield was summoned, and the party at midnight repaired to the Executive Mansion, aroused he President, and after a consultation the President directed that the necessary troops be dispatched to the scene. General Schofield at 1 o'clock Wednesday morning sent a telegram to General Brooke, commanding the Department of Dakota, ordering him to send troops from Fort McKinney at break of day to the scene of the trouble.

Accordingly, Col. Van Horne's com-mand, consisting of three troops of cavalry, received orders to march to the scene of battle at once. About 3 a. m. the sound of "forward march" rang out clear on the morning air, and the bluecoated troopers started out of the fort and galloped toward the "A" ranch. The | chap one day: distance was covered by daylight, and the commanding officer and Sheriff Angus held a consultation. The Sheriff reported that he had ordered the men to surrender, but they had refused and had opened fire on his men.

Col. Van Horne found that the rustlers, small stockmen and the Sheriff's posse had completely surrounded the ranch and cut off all means of escape, so that the stockmen's forces were entrapped. However, the military had no trouble in inducing the stockmen to surrender. The only provision that was exacted was that they be taken to Fort McKinney and not be allowed to fall into the hands of Angus or his men or the rustlers. Colonel Van Horne consented, and under the protection of the cavalry the stockmen's forces, consisting of sixty-five men, quickly saddled and bridled their horses and rode to Fort McKinney, where they are now confined under guard. The Sheriff's posse and the forces of rustlers and small ranchers rode ahead to Buffalo or dispersed to their various farms.

Just what the next move will be cannot be said, as the feeling on both sides is intensely bitter. The settlers for many miles around the scene of the trouble are fleeing for their lives, and not without reason. Stage coaches have been stopped, and men shot down in broad daylight. To make matters worse, a band of Crow Indians have left their reservation, and are helping the rustlers by running off cattle and horses from the ranches, while it is intimated that a prominent Sheriff in the neighborhood is in sympathy with the thieves.

The trouble is one of long standing. A number of small stock-growers and others who tried the doubtful experiment of farming on the arid lands have been injured by the owners of large herds, or the men who represented them on "the plains." Some of the little fel-lows were driven off and felt sore. Their case has been taken up by a lot of lawless characters in much the same way as the grievances of workingmen in London are sometimes made the pretext for mob outrages by the worst classes of the British metropolis. That is why the wicked justlers find it easy to operate; they are more or less sympathized with by the aggrieved ones. For this reason juries have failed to convict in cases where the worst of crimes have been proved, the shooting down of men in cold blood being added to the theft of live stock. Then it is said the sheriffs and deputy sheriffs of the thief-infested counties have owed their positions to the votes and influence of the outlaws, and that in one or two cases the sheriffs have personally appropriated stray cattle and have had deputies who were actually rustlers. Under such conditions the thieves became bold. They not only took unbranded calves and put their own marks upon them, but had the audacity to run off by the carload cattle and horses that had been stolen from the ranches of men whom they had intimidated to the extent of forcing them to leave the place. The ranchmen tried the virtue of association, and adopted regulations for the tracing of the stolen property when offered for sale in markets eastward, as well as for reclaimthe value of estrays. Then rustlers essayed another role. is reported that during last year they "did a land-office business in selling dressed beef to army contractors and to the subcontractors working on the Burnington and Missouri grade in the northern part of the State." They stole hundreds of cattle, either by shooting them down or running them off to be slaughtered for sale to the persons sufficiently unscrupulous to buy the meat fellows guilty of these outrageous provillainy by posing as small stockmen, and actually held a meeting at Buffalo, in the northern part of Johnson County, title of the Northern Wyoming Farmers' and Stock Growers' Association."

at a big cut from regular prices. The ceedings are said to have cloaked their where they masqueraded under the They then arranged for the annual round-up to suit their conven-ience in forestalling the reputable cattlemen and in order to get in their deadly work on the "mavericks" (unbranded cattle) before the rightful owners appeared on the scene. This was the

The Insect Wax of Chins.

Mr. Charles Denby, the United States Minister in Pekin, in a recent report to the State Department, gives an instructive account of an interesting article of export known as "insect wax," which sells in Shanghai for $1,000 per ton. In Western China, near Thibet, there grows the "crackling-flea" tree, an evergreen, on the bark of which in the spring appear small brown scales containing myriads of little animals-the larvæ of the white wax insect. These scales are gathered and carried some hundreds of miles to the Chien-Ch'ang Valley, and hung in packages under the branches of a sort of an ash tree, called the white wax tree. The larvæ soon become'insects, the female developing the scales to propagate the race, and the males exereting the substance known as white wax, which is supposed to be interceded by nature as a protection to the scales. It first appears like snow under the boughs, but in 100 days is complete and a quarter of an inch thick, and the branches are then cut off, as much wax removed by hand as possible, and the branches boiled to get the balance. This, of course, destroys the insects, which are fed to the pigs, and even the trees cannot be used again for three years. The following year the insects are brought from the Thibetan border and the process is repeated. The export figures, which show 1,500,000 pounds, worth nearly $500,000 in gold, give only a partial idea of the proportion of the industry, for immense quantities are shipped from Yang-tse in Chinese junks, and many thousands of pounds across the mountains or down the river to Canton.

REAL LIFE. A Charming New England Lady Tells Her

Experience Both Abroad and in Amer-The unwritten romances of life are more wonderful and far more interesting than the most vivid works of fiction. The one we are about to relate occurred in real life, and is both interesting and instructive. Mrs. Jennie Ray formerly lived in Man-chester, N. H. Her home was pleasant, her surroundings comfortable. In the year 1880 she visited England, and while in that country began to experience strange sensations. At first she attributed them to the change of climate, but they continued and increased, until finally, like many another woman, she became utterly discouraged.

It was while in this condition that Mrs.
Ray returned to America and her home. Thousands of women who read this story can appreciate the condition in which Mrs. Ray then was, and sympathize with her suffering. Two prominent physicians were called and endeavored to do all in their power for her relief. In spite, however, of their skill Mrs. Ray grew weaker and more depressed, while the agony she endured seemed to increase. It was at this time that a noted physician who was called de-clared Mrs. Ray was suffering from cancer, said there was no help, and told her friends she could not live more than a week at the

And here comes the interesting part of the story, which we will endeavor to tell in Mrs. Ray's own words. She said:

"Unknown to all these physicians, I had been using a preparation of which I had heard much. I did not tell the physicians because I feared they would ridicule me, and perhaps order its discontinuance. During all the while that the physicians were attending me the preparation was steadily and faithfully doing its own work in its own way, and I had faith in its power. At last the doctor said there was no use of his coming, for he could do me no good. I had suffered so much that I was quite willing to die, but it seems I was nearer relief than I knew. One week from the day the doctor last called a false growth, as large as a coffee cup, and which tooked as though it had been very large, left me. I sent for a doctor, and he declared it was a fibroid tumor, but said he had never known one to come away of itself before. I immediately began to gain health and strength, and I unhesitatingly declare that my re-cue from death was due solely to the marvellous effects of Warner's Safe Cure, which was the remedy I took unknown to the physicians, and which certainly rescued me from the grave. It is my firm belief that many ladies who are said to die of cancer of the womb are cases like mine, and if they could be induced to use Warner's Safe Cure they, like me, might be

The above graphic account is perfectly true in every respect. Mrs. Jennie Ray is now living at 142 West 6th street, South Boston, Mass, and if any lady doubts the above statement she can address Mrs. Ray, who will gladly answer all questions or grant an interview of a confidential nature to any lady who may choose to call upon her. It is said that "truth is stranger than fiction," and when the thousands of suffering, helpless women who are upon the road which physicians s: y leads only to death, consider the story as above given, there is reason for hope and joy, even although they may be now in the depths of despondency and misery. To such ladies the above truthful account is willingly given.
